BARRACKS FOR CODDINGTON POINT

Although it is stated that because of the shortage of water and for other reasons, the full occupancy of Coddington Point will not be made use of by the Naval Training Station immediately, there are indications that the vast tract of land will be turned over to contractors at once for the erection of some of the permanent buildings that will cover a large part of the ground. On account of the scarcity of housing accommodations in Newport it is proposed to house the workmen in tents on the ground as long as weather conditions will permit, and a large number of adequate tents have been placed on the ground.

The development of the Point will not be carried out in a make-shift way but will be in accordance with carefully considered plans worked out by naval engineers before the Government took over the land. The Training Station proper is crowded to its utmost capacity, and the increased accommodations on the Point are urgently needed to permit of handling the large numbers that it had been expected to send through this Station. It is quite probable that any increase of the Station forces will be postponed until some barracks can be completed on the Coddington Point property, and by that time it is probable that the fall rains will have increased the city water supply so that a water famine may no longer be feared.

TO CANVASS THE SOLDIER VOTE

Under the new State law the boards of canvassers of the various towns are to make a preliminary canvass of the voting lists on August 7th, about one month earlier than usual, for the purpose of going over the names of those voters who are in the armed service of the United States at home and abroad, and who will be permitted to vote at the fall elections without returning to their home precincts. It is a mooted question as to how efficient this work can be, as it is some job to keep track of the men in the service who might be qualified to vote in Newport. City Clerk Fullerton generally finds his hands full from the late summer until after the city election in December, and this year promises to give him more trouble than ever. The time is doubtless coming when Newport will have a special board to take charge of registration, canvassing and all election work.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Wheeler observed their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary on Friday, receiving the congratulations of their many friends. Mr. Wheeler is entirely recovered in health after his recent illness, and is ready to tackle another submarine story at any time. But when he is told to tell a submarine story it will have the facts and not the baseless rumors that have been flying around Newport for the past week.

The luncheon and sale at Channing Church on Thursday for the benefit of the Ladies Aid Society of the church, was well attended and a goodly sum was realized. The luncheon was excellent as usual, and a number of nice and fancy articles were sold.

The 1918 Social Index, which was turned to subscribers this week, has attracted favorable attention wherever it went. It is a valuable and handy reference volume, and much favorable criticism has been made.

POLITICS AWAKING

The fall political campaign will soon be in full swing. Although this will not be a Presidential year, it is in some respects of hardly less importance in Rhode Island, because there are three Congressional representatives to be elected, as well as one United States Senator. It is hoped that all these offices will be filled by Republicans, bent on using every effort to bring the war to a successful conclusion.

Senator LaBaton Bradford Colt, who will be a candidate to succeed himself at the polls this fall, has been in Newport for a few days, and on Saturday will be the guest of honor at a luncheon tendered by Governor Deekman to some of the leading citizens of Newport. Governor Deekman is making every effort to advance the interests of Senator Colt, and if the citizens will do their duty at the polls Judge Colt will receive a big plurality in November. The Republicans had all the best of the registration in June, especially in Newport, so that that gives them a big advantage to start with.

Locally there is considerable interest felt to see what candidates may be in the field for various important offices. Mayor Burdick announced some time ago that he would accept the nomination for Congress from this district, and there is little doubt but that it will be tendered to him, although there are some aspirants from the northern part of the district who would like to have it. Whether Congressman O'Shaughnessy will again be in the field from this district, or whether he will aspire to Senatorial honors against Senator Colt, is something that time alone can tell. If he should be out of the Congressional race, there are a number who would like to have the Democratic nomination, even though it could avail them little against Mayor Burdick, Judge Jeremiah P. Mahoney, State Tax Commissioner, has been prominently mentioned, but it is doubtful if he would care to accept the nomination.

The death of Senator Guy Morriss makes a vacancy in the State Senate from Newport, and it is regarded as quite possible that Representative Max Levy may receive the Republican nomination, which is practically equivalent to an election. If so, there will be a vacancy in the third representative district in this city. In the first district, Representative Fletcher W. Lawton will doubtless be a candidate for re-election, but there is some question as to what may develop in the second district. Representative Fred B. Coggeshall has been in poor health for some time, and it may be that he may not wish to be a candidate again. The name of William R. Harvey has been mentioned in connection with this office, but as he has also been mentioned for Senator and for Mayor, there is some question as to what he may decide to accept.

On the Democratic slate there has as yet been little mention of candidates for the various offices. It is generally believed that Representatives William A. Maher and James J. Martin will be candidates for re-election from the fourth and fifth districts, respectively, but what the Democrats are likely to do in regard to the first three districts or the Senatorial nomination is still shrouded in uncertainty.

How much effect the soldier vote will have on the fall elections is something that cannot be predicted. At the last session of the General Assembly provision was made for recording the soldier vote, but it is uncertain if this can be done in a manner satisfactory to the high command of the American armies, so that military efficiency will not be unduly interfered with.

One can hardly blame a crew for shooting first and inquiring afterward when a submarine appears close at hand. But the life on an Allied submarine can hardly be a bed of roses at this time. Friend and foe alike are to be avoided. The British had the same experience in the early stages of the war, when more than one friendly submarine was fired on or rammed. But when the report spread on Thursday that a captured submarine was being brought in, it was rather disappointing to find that it was not a German.

Mr. J. Allen Barker of this city, a well known retired business man, has been appointed by Governor Deekman as a member of the Inland Fish Commission to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Daniel B. Fearling. He is a member of the representative council.

Men are departing from the Training Station for active duty across the ships or across the pond nearly every day. They invariably leave Newport in splendid spirits.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN

The board of aldermen had a long and busy session at its weekly meeting on Thursday evening, Mayor Burdick and Alderman Ledy being absent, and the presiding officer's chair being filled by President Joseph J. Kirby. Two matters of considerable interest came up—one the matter of condemning the Wetmore land for the widening of Bath Road, and the other the suspension of a pool room license.

A decree was presented, declaring that a portion of the Wetmore land on Bath Road was required for the widening of the roadway, and appointing a commission to fix the value on the land. No action was taken, however, the matter being continued on the calendar for two weeks.

A hearing was held on the complaint against the pool room at 27 Long Wharf, the license standing in the name of George Yampolis. This occupied considerable time, as the case was fought hard. The specific charge against the place was that card playing had been carried on there on Sunday, July 7, several men being arrested in a raid by the police and several of them having pleaded guilty to playing cards on Sunday. It developed that a man named Milton, who had at least been considering the question of purchasing the business, was acting as manager of the place. He denied that he had been card playing on Sunday, saying that the playing stopped before midnight on Saturday night. Some other information about the place and its management was presented by the police officer and the board finally voted to revoke the license, although it was suggested that suspension of the license for a fixed period might be warranted enough.

The other business transacted by the board was principally of a routine character, pay rolls being approved and a number of licenses granted. The street commissioner reported that repairs to Farewell street will be begun in two weeks, when the new ties of the street railway are expected to be on hand.

THE 1918 DIRECTORY

The Newport City Directory for 1918, published by Sampson, Murdock Co. of Boston, has made its appearance and as usual is a very valuable volume. A feature that has been incorporated this year is the giving of the names of the wives, as far as possible. This added greatly to the difficulty in compiling the information for this edition, but is a valuable feature that will doubtless be further developed in the future.

There are 16,103 names in the 1918 Directory, which is an increase of 1,439 over the previous year. There were 14,135 changes made, including 2,484 names added, 2,065 names erased, and 7,586 changes of address, occupation, etc.

Owing to the increased number of names, the Directory is printed in somewhat smaller type than in previous years, but there is no loss in legibility, and it prevents undue expansion of the book into a volume too bulky to handle. There is a goodly amount of advertising matter in the book.

SENTENCED FOR CHECK WORK

At the request of the Newport police, the force of Detroit, Mich., recently arrested a man known as Frederick B. Popper and claiming New York as his residence, who was wanted here on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses. Inspector Palmer went after the man and returned with him on Thursday. He was at once arraigned before Judge Baker and was sentenced to six months in the Providence County Jail.

It is charged that Popper passed two checks in Newport during the early part of the month, one on a local business house in payment for merchandise, and the other at a fashionable hotel here, where he obtained the cash. Good police work resulted in his capture in the automobile city.

Miss Rose Dolan, of Rosemont, Pa., and Newport, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan, has been awarded the Croix de Guerre for bravery under fire. Miss Dolan has been doing excellent work in the canteen service abroad for a number of months. Mr. and Mrs. Dolan are at their summer home near Bailey's Beach.

Miss Grace Vanderbilt, daughter of General and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, was formally presented to Society on Friday evening. Following a dinner at "Beaufort," a dance was given by Mrs. Ogden Goelet at "Ochre Court." Miss Vanderbilt's father is in the active service, having recently been promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General.

RECENT DEATHS

JOHN H. TAYLOR

Mr. John H. Taylor, a well known Newport business man, died at the Newport Hospital on Tuesday evening after an illness of several months. He had been engaged in business as a carriage painter in this city for more than forty years, the firm at one time being Taylor & Howard, but Mr. Joseph T. Howard retired from the partnership some years ago to establish his motor livery business.

Mr. Taylor was active in musical circles, having been connected with the leading bands of Newport as a snare drummer, in which capacity he had few superiors. The changes in military bands in this city within the last forty years have been rather extensive, but each new band that was formed was anxious to secure the services of Mr. Taylor to handle the snare drum.

Mr. Taylor was at the time of his death the senior vestryman of St. George's Church, with which he had been connected for many years. He is survived by a widow and one son—Mr. Harry Taylor.

SUBMARINE ACTIVITIES

The U-boat activities along the coast have caused some busy times for the naval forces of this Station. All available craft was sent out from here as soon as the reports were received of the sinking of the cruiser San Diego and the hulk at Cape Cod. Immediately reports began to come in of the capture of U-boats in large flocks, some being reported as captured off Block Island, and one report spread by sailors on the streets Monday night telling of a submarine being hauled at one of the wharves here. Unfortunately, all these reports were absolutely without foundation, as far as could be learned.

In spite of the submarine activities, there has been no cessation of communication between Newport and New York by water. The various steamers are running as usual, every precaution being taken to protect them. It is a beautiful sight to see them going out of the Bay, and many persons gather on the shore each evening to watch the departure.

THE COAL SITUATION

The various coal dealers are making every effort to fill their orders for early delivery, while they have the coal on hand, a considerable supply now being in the various yards. The prices are likely to advance at any time, but will be fixed by the fuel commission. The Government is making efforts now to expedite both the production and the transportation of coal, in the hope of preventing such a famine as occurred last year. Whether the men at the head of the Government's coal administration will prove equal to the demands upon them remains to be seen, and most people are frankly skeptical.

Regulations went into effect this week, preventing the use of any unnecessary outdoor illumination on three evenings each week, similar to the regulations that were in effect last winter.

The Fall River police are exhibiting considerable activity to prevent Newport hackney auto drivers from soliciting business in Fall River for their return trips. Five Newporters have been arrested there on charges of violating the hackney or automobile laws. The Newport hackney men do a large business in the afternoon in transporting soldiers and sailors to Fall River and also in bringing them back again. Inasmuch as the local men have taken steps to prevent out-of-town cars from soliciting business in Newport, the Fall River hackney men are trying to reciprocate.

Newport County furnished a considerable percentage of the draft that left Providence Tuesday morning to join the National Army at Camp Upton. The total number leaving from this State was 1342, which was only a little short of the required number. Others will go shortly to make up the full quota. The physicians of draft age will also be called into service very shortly, as there is need for many more men for surgical duty in the army. The recent Allied offensive in France will undoubtedly make a demand for many more medical officers.

Rev. William Safford Jones, minister at the Channing Memorial Church, will preach in Dorchester next Sunday, and his pulpit will be occupied by Rev. Harold Greene Arnold of West Roxbury.

DEFICIENT WATER SUPPLY

As has several times been predicted in the Mercury, the local water situation has reached a stage where the utmost economy is necessary in order to conserve the supply till the fall rains come. The Water Works has issued a warning to all to be careful in the use of water, and the use of automatic lawn sprinklers has been entirely discontinued. At the Government stations, the commanding officers have warned the men to conserve the water supply as far as possible, stringent regulations being put into effect. The use of fresh water for washing the clothing of the enlisted men has been discontinued, salt water being used.

As has been many times stated, the demands upon the water supply from the Newport Water Works has increased out of all proportion to the natural growth that was expected when the water system was built. All the Government stations here draw from the city supply and with many thousands of men using the water constantly the demand is very great. There has been practically no rainfall during the summer, and even in the spring the precipitation was somewhat deficient, so that the deposit of water in the ponds and reservoirs has been below the normal. This with the greatly increased consumption presents a situation that can only be met by careful conservation.

As soon as times permit of new construction, the Newport Water Works will undoubtedly begin the building of the proposed new reservoir at Laxton's Valley, plans for which were made several years ago. This is a big proposition, however, which cannot be carried out at a time when there is a great scarcity of labor and supplies. Neither would it be of any immediate use if constructed now, for it would take time to fill the reservoir and to thoroughly cleanse the surface water which is not considered desirable for use.

The weather during the early part of the week was the hottest of the season. For three days the thermometer hovered in the neighborhood of ninety degrees, which is really exceptional for Newport. It was of course much hotter in the cities, and consequently there was a big influx of visitors. Last Sunday was a big day at the Beach, the bathing accommodations being taxed throughout the day, and all the amusements doing a big business. The trolleys were crowded during the day and evening, and the number of automobiles coming in here being almost a record-breaker.

The Art Association extended invitations to a large number of persons to attend the lecture by Chas. de la France, chaplain of the Chasseurs Alpins, at the rooms of the Association on Friday afternoon. His subject was "L'Alsace Francaise, et l'Alme de la France." There has been a good attendance at the rooms of the Association for the past two weeks to view the splendid exhibition of paintings and statuary.

The police have under arrest a woman who is charged with assaulting her husband with a dangerous weapon—a wit, a razor. They are also searching for a man who is charged with firing several shots at his wife from a revolver. The latter search led them into Middletown Wednesday evening, but they were too late as their prey had fled.

The place vacated by the 66th Regiment at Fort Adams will soon be taken by another which will be made up here, new men coming in rapidly to fill its ranks. It is quite possible that the men of the new regiment will be kept away from Fall River.

Mr. Harold L. Peckham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Peckham, has enlisted in the Marine Corps and is now at Paris Island, S. C., the big Marine training camp.

Mr. Henry F. Wheeler of this city, who has been serving as pay clerk at the Naval Reserve Force on duty at New York for some time, has been promoted to the rank of Ensign.

The Newport Improvement Association is making an appeal for an increased membership, in order to bring to its activities the increased strength of a larger following.

Newport will undoubtedly take part in the Nation-wide celebration of Lafayette Day on September 6, which is also the anniversary of the Battle of the Marne.

Alderman John E. Ledy is seriously ill at his home on Franklin street.

MIDDLETOWN.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Company B, Women's Auxiliary of the Newport Young Women's Christian Association, were guests last week at an all-day picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Russell Peckham on Green End Avenue, Mrs. Peckham entertaining the guests jointly with her husband's mother, Mrs. Howard H. Peckham.

Rev. Everett P. Smith, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, announced at the Sunday afternoon service that, through the courtesy of the vestry of St. Paul's Church, Newton, his rector, Rev. Robert Bachman, Jr., formerly of New York, would assume charge of the church at St. Mary's and the Holy Cross during the year's absence of Mr. Smith, who is expected to sail for France next week for Red Cross work overseas. Until September Rev. Mr. Bachman will be assisted by Rev. Malbone H. Hirschhead, who is at "Enclave" for the summer. After that time arrangements will be made with local clergymen to assist. July 28th will be Mr. Smith's last Sunday.

The address scheduled to have been given at the town hall on Tuesday evening, before the Middletown Constabulary by a military expert, had to be given up at the last moment as the speaker was obliged to cancel his engagement.

Mrs. Howard G. Peckham has returned from the Newport Hospital much improved in health.

Miss Dorothy Champlin Peckham left Monday for a month's visit with a former classmate, Miss Gladys Gatten at Washington, D. C. Miss Peckham expects to visit Baltimore and Annapolis before returning. She was accompanied as far as Providence by her father, Mr. James Willis Peckham, who with his daughter spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Orrin P. Barker, formerly of Middletown.

An illustrated lecture will be given Sunday evening next at the Berkeley Parish House upon conditions in France and Belgium. The speaker, who has been secured through the kindness of Miss Alice Brownell, vice president of St. Columba's Guild, will be Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith of Boston, who has spent much time in these countries and who has been deeply interested in the child welfare department of war work.

Mrs. Reuben Wallace Peckham of Springfield, Mass., with her younger son, Parker, and daughter, Priscilla, are guests of her husband's mother, Mrs. Elsie Clark Peckham. The older son, Harry, has been spending the summer since school closed with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Peckham. Mr. Peckham, who is engaged in secretarial work in the work in France, expects to be away two years.

The large amount of antique furniture, china and pewter, the effects of the late Miss Susan Ann Anthony, who formerly resided at the Anthony farm, East Main Road, which were sold at public auction Thursday last, brought out a large number of antique collectors as well as many who came merely from curiosity. The collection, it was said, was well worth seeing. The best of the articles brought high prices, among them the hall clock for which $350 was paid by a Worcester man. There was considerable competition in regard to the mirrors, the prices ranging from $20 to $30, while round tables brought $40.

Mrs. Alfred Russell Peckham, who has as her guest Miss Charlotte W. Davenport of Torrington, N. Y., a former Newport classmate, recently gave a luncheon in her honor to a number of Newport friends.

Mr. Arthur G. Sisson, who runs one of the large trucks for the Aquidneck Dairyman's Association, has so strained himself lifting the heavy cans in and out of the high van, that he has been confined to his home since last Friday and different ones have been supplying in his absence, mainly Mr. Stephen Barker. Two hundred and eighty cans are carried at each of two daily trips, and while a good many are of the 10-qt. size, a number hold 20 quarts. This means handling each can four times a day which certainly is a Herculean task. Since his ill turn, Mr. Sisson's place has been filled by two men.

The Newport Artillery made camp on Wyatt Road in Middletown last Saturday night, and had a period of drill on Sunday. The weather was very hot, so the men were not worked too hard in the heat of the day, returning to the Armory on Clarke Street in the early afternoon. Major William Knox was in command.

The work of grading and plowing Vanderbilt Circle opposite Equality Park, in preparation for sowing it to grass, has been finished this week, and even before the grass goes in a vast improvement in appearance is noticed. This spot has long appeared very unkempt.

WOULDN'T PART WITH 'CHAW'

If there is a general impression that America is slow to fall into the routine of economy and conservation the belief has not impressed itself upon a veteran photographer to seamen, whose curbstone studio is somewhere along the river front, writes a New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Recently he had a hard five minutes with a Yankee subject, and he decided that certain traits of the Scot are developing in these United States. The photographer piped the man of the sea rolling along the street and besought him to have his picture taken, assuring him that the loved ones at home are not to be forgotten and that those days a striking pictorial moment is of especial value. The seaman, just off his vessel, stopped. He was a very grumpy seaman, but one likely to have funds, somehow, and so the photographer was at great pains to get him suitably posed and ready for the permanent record of his afternoon appointment. The last detail had been arranged and the seaman was standing stately and determinedly against a fence when the camera man started to press the bulb. "Wait," said the subject, getting out of pose. "I'll be here for a week and I'll see for again for a picture." "Well, why not now?" "Cause," answered the economical seaman, "I got a chaw of tobacco in me face today. I'll be along again toward the end of the week—some day when I ain't got a chaw in me mouth."

HAS ONLY IMPULSE TO RUN

When Under Influence of Fear, Horse Has No Other Idea Save That of Blind Flight.

It was pathetic to see the terror of London horses when the tank passed through the city recently, wrote a correspondent. Many of them sighted the new-fangled contraption at a distance and stood with ears pricked forward, eyeballs staring and nostrils distended, and had to be held and screened until it passed by. It was, of course, the same in the early days of motor-cars, but despite his tendency to panic the horse is intelligent if given a chance. When bicycles were novelties an acquaintance tells me—his horse, in a Cheshire country district, showed great fear until a bicycle was one day brought to him and held beneath his nose so that he could inspect it in detail. He never minded them afterward. According to Remondes, the horse "is the only animal which under the influence of fear loses the possession of every other sense in one mad and masterful desire to run." This pathetic falling was utilized by our men in the recent advance on Cambrai, where at one point, it is recorded, a squadron of cavalry dismounted and stampeded their horses, which fled panic-stricken in the darkness toward the enemy lines, and so drew the German fire—Manchester Guardian.

"Uncle Sam."

The popular term "Uncle Sam," as applied to the United States government, originated in Troy and Greenbush, N. Y., during the war of 1812-14. Albert Anderson, Jr., one of the contractors supplying the army of the north with provisions, in October, 1812, advertised for proposals for pork and beef to be delivered to him during the first four months of the following year in New York, Troy, Albany and Waterford. Among those who contracted to furnish him with beef, packed in barrels, were Ebenezer and Samuel Wilson, the latter familiarly called by the soldiers "Uncle Sam." As the beef was delivered at Greenbush barracks from time to time the Troy soldiers referred to it as "Uncle Sam's" beef. The other soldiers, not knowing who "Uncle Sam" was, thought that the term was applied to the letters U. S. stamped upon the barrels by the government officials. Consequently it was not long before the term "Uncle Sam" meaning the United States, was in common use.

Japanese and Malays.

The Japanese hat resembles much the Malayan. So also does the Japanese umbrella. The ancient Japanese helmet was adorned with horns of animals. Similar helmets exist in the Malayan archipelago. The old-fashioned weapons of the Japanese police, used in particular for catching thieves, are still used by Malayan policemen. The custom of catching fish at night by torchlight prevails both in Japan and in the Malayan archipelago. An ordeal with boiling water, a special sort of football game, the popularity of cock fighting and the custom of keeping slaying insects in little cages are found both among the Japanese and Malays. All this, asserts a writer, speaks in favor of the descent of the Japanese from the Malays.

Must Have Same Faith.

An appreciation of beauty, of the adaptation of design to a purpose, may help us to believe in a wisdom, in a plan far beyond our ability to know or understand. A contemplation of the natural world will strengthen faith; make hope more buoyant. Everyone must have some faith if living sanely. Nothing created is without its purpose. As long as we see the design fulfilling its purpose in some things, we may believe that all is working to its appointed end though we know not what that end is.

New Plants From China.

From the far interior of China an agent of the department of agriculture, after three years of travel and research, has brought numerous new plants, flowers, vegetables and trees that are believed to be adaptable to the United States. For example, there is the yucca tree, which bears a heavy crop of several fruit, resembling a fig, and growing on a dried and condensed similar to the Persian date.

HOW THE ROMANS AND GREEKS BATTLED

IN THE WARS OF LONG AGO.

In the old days when the Romans and Greeks fought furious battles, the charioteers drove their cars in all directions, hurled their javelins, and by the din and clatter of horses and wheels commonly threw the ranks of the enemy into disorder, and, making their way among the squadrons of the enemy's cavalry leaped down from the chariots and fought on foot, quotes the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The charioteers then withdrew little by little, out of the fight, and placed their chariots in such a way that if they were hard pressed they could readily retreat to their own side. Thus in battle they afforded the mobility of cavalry with the steadiness of infantry. Daily practice enabled them to pull up their horses at full speed when on a steep slope, or to run out on the pole and stand off the yoke, and to get quickly back into the chariot.

With the introduction of cavalry in the later age came larger horses, but their use for this purpose seems to have been restricted to isolated areas. There is no doubt that the West German tribes as late as the campaign of Caesar in Gaul, used only the shaggy pony. It is said in cavalry actions they held it disgraceful and shameful to use any kind of a saddle, and instead of charging in squadrons they dismounted and fought on foot. As far as England is concerned the art of riding seems to have been introduced by the Normans. The Saxons appear to have been but indifferent horsemen.

CHEAPER BOOTS FOR BRITISH

How Government Will Standardize Supply and Propose Four Classes.

Consul Franklin D. Hale, Huddersfield, England, says:

"It is reported that the shortage in and constantly rising price of civilian footwear has caused the government to formulate a scheme for the production of cheaper boots. It is proposed that four classes shall be manufactured under government control, two for men and two for boys and youths. Those for men will cost from 16 shillings to 16 shillings six pence ($3.16 to $4) per pair, and those for boys and youths, 10 shillings six pence ($2.53) and above. These standardized boots will be especially adapted to the needs of agricultural workers, quarrymen and miners, and for common, ordinary town wear by artisans."

"The plans will be developed speedily, and soon these boots will be in the hands of retailers. If they lack finish and style, they will excel in durability, for only a stout quality of leather will be used. As the government controls all leather supplies, there will be no shortage of raw material. Probably flaps will be used for the uppers, as this material is not stout enough for the regular army boot. Later, standardized boots for women and girls may also be produced."

SECRETS OF SUBMARINE LIFE

Why U-Boat Crews Need Not Face Sea Sickness.

It is stated authoritatively that life on board a U-boat is, all things considered, quite a little more comfortable than on a destroyer. Primarily, the former has an advantage over the latter in that in bad weather she doesn't have to face it, but can submerge until conditions improve, observes the Marine Journal.

A U-boat's crew need never risk sea sickness, and it is customary to avoid the conditions that produce it. Being shut up in a submarine does not entail any particular discomfort to her officers or men, who can smoke and amuse themselves much as sailors do on surface vessels. A long submergence may result in the air getting somewhat heavy, but a few hours on the surface at night with the conning tower lid off purifies the atmosphere within the craft. When submerged, no cooking, of course, is possible, but when at sea an electric cooker provides as good meals as can be asked for.

How Tannin is Obtained.

The manufacture of tanning materials from oaks and chestnuts, which are plants of slow growth, is responsible for widespread deforestation in France, and accordingly efforts have been made to find substitutes for these sources of tanning among plants of rapid growth. According to a note in the Comptes Rendus a promising plant for this purpose is Rhamnus fraxinifolia Torr, the tubers of which contain as much as 28 or 30 per cent of tannin. Recent experiments show that this plant, which has been grown successfully in Corsica and southern France, will also endure the climate of northern France.

How to Avoid Grimy Ceilings.

Make a simple mat or cover of coarse woven burlap and place it on the radiator, and you will not be bothered with dirty ceilings in the future, says the Popular Science Monthly. The open-weaved hemmed cloth allows the air to rise through it, but sifts or filters out the dust, which is removed by an occasional washing.

GERMAN PRISON CAMPS WHERE YANKS ARE HELD

Of these 27 German prison camps in which Americans are held, Tübingen, near Danzig, is the chief prison camp for our captured boys in uniform, according to advices reaching the American Red Cross. In each of the camps shown by a black square on the map and in one small camp which cannot be located, there are either captured soldiers or else American seamen taken from submerged merchantmen. The Red Cross had direct reports from 231 men in these camps at the beginning of June, and to each is sending through its prisoners' relief warehouses at Bern, 20 pounds of food a week and is supplying clothing, comforts, tobacco, and in fact everything the men need. In supplying captured soldiers and sailors the Red Cross acts as the transmitting agency for the army or the navy, which furnishes the supplies. In addition to the prisoners actually on its records, the Red Cross believes that there are some 200 additional American prisoners in Germany who have not yet reached the prison camps where they are to be located permanently. The Red Cross, however, is already prepared to care for those as soon as reported, and in fact has stored in Bern or in transit supplies enough to maintain 22,000 prisoners, if necessary, for six months. Awaiting American prisoners sent to Tübingen is a stock of Red Cross packages of food and clothing in charge of three of our captured boys, who are appointed the Red Cross relief committee for that prison camp. Similar reserve stocks will be placed in other prisons as it becomes evident that they are to be used as centers for imprisoned Americans, who thus will be fed and clothed humanely.

BRITON PRAISES "YANK DOC" THREE SONS ARE FIGHTING

Officer of Essex Regiment Says Lieut. C. T. McCarthy is Brave and Beloved.

London, England.—An officer of the Ninth Essex regiment, in a letter written home, pays tribute to an American officer serving with the regiment.

"Lieut. C. T. McCarthy, medical officer of our regiment," says the letter, "is one of the first Americans serving in France to obtain the British military cross. He was attached to our regiment last December. Our 'Yank doc,' as we call him, is one of the best of men. He is loved by all the officers and men."

"He is strict, but never has anybody been wounded or sick without the doctor going to him, no matter what the shelling or other conditions. He obtained the military cross for magnificent work in the recent Albert fighting. He went to the front with our regiment in motor buses to meet the Boche and during the worst period our regiment has known he was always in front with his medical aid. At one time he had his aid post in a quarry right in our front line and always where the fighting was worst he was with the wounded. In slack times he made tea and carried it to those who could not make it themselves. Never does he miss an opportunity of performing a kind act. Here's to our 'Yank doc.'"

ETHER MAKES QUICK CURE

Negro, Trying to Avoid Draft, Forgets About Back Disease When He Comes To.

Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga.—A Georgia negro seaman was being examined by the medical officers and developed a strange case of spinal deformity. He declared he had been afflicted for years. When tried at drill he was so drawn and bent in the back that military service seemed an impossibility. He was taken to the hospital and told an apparently straight story of his affliction. A light dose of ether was administered. When the negro returned to semiconsciousness he raised up, stretched himself perfectly straight, walked about the room, and acted normally. Reminded that he was thought a cripple he again lapsed into a horrible looking deformed soldier, but this time it did not work. "Boss," he said, "dar medun you-all gimme sho' cured me quick."

HE WAS FOR GERMANY—GOT TAR AND FEATHERS

Ticksburg, Miss.—"I am for Germany and I am awaiting the day—and it won't be more than two or three years at most—when Germany invades the United States. Germany will make a real country out of this slipshod, grafting nation." This statement, accredited to W. M. Wilkerson, caused him to be taken from a passenger train and treated to a coat of tar and feathers. He was then committed to jail.

The other day I answered a knock at the door and encountered a small boy, who immediately tried to sell me a choice assortment of knitting needles. "But, sonny, I don't knit," said I, thinking to close the matter. He looked at me reproachfully for a moment and then: "Lady, aren't you going to do anything for your country?"—Chicago Tribune.

Far From Ideal.

Tom's Sort of Girl

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

"It isn't so much the fact that she's a cabaret singer or even that Tom was deceiving me—but she simply wouldn't be Tom's sort of girl. They'd be sure to be unhappy." This is what Tom Rawdon's substantial older sister said when she first suspected that, while Tom had told her he was going to marry one kind of girl, as a matter of fact he was going to marry another kind of girl.

The sister's informer was Pete Brevier, one of Tom's old pals from the town where he and the sister both made their home. The young man had made a hurried trip to the big city and there had met Tom and "his girl," and suspecting nothing irregular had come back blurring out to the sister that he had met "Tom and that pretty little cabaret singer that Tom was going to marry."

In the meantime for some weeks Tom's letters to his sister had occasional references to the stenographer at his office—Miss Remson—whom he hoped some day to marry his wife. "I hope you aren't going to raise a rumpus because she isn't a girl of leisure," Tom wrote home, knowing perfectly well his older sister's ability to raise a rumpus when things didn't go to suit her ideas. "Miss Remson is as fine a woman as I ever met. She came to this office as a stenographer a week or so after I did, and though she hasn't had exactly the same bringing up that you have, you are sure to like her."

Tom's sister had thoroughly approved, in fact, she was so sure, before Tom wrote this, that Tom would be inclined to choose what she chose to call "some scatter-brained little girl with her head in her heels," that the news that he was to marry a girl who was serious enough to be a stenographer came as a relief.

Then came the confirmation of what she had always suspected. He had actually introduced a cabaret dancer as his fiancée, and of course a cabaret dancer was a scatter-brained little girl with her head in her heels. How could she be anything else if she was a professional dancer?

The sister spared no time in packing the few duds she considered necessary for such a mission, making her husband assure her that he would be quite happy during her absence and going off to the big city to "raise a rumpus."

She didn't even write to her brother that she was coming, but after she did get in about five o'clock one evening telephoned to his office and announced, in a voice so cordial that it gave no warning of her suspicion and intention, that she was there.

"Now I know," she said.

"Meet you for dinner? Why, of course I will," Tom Rawdon said to the sister over the phone. "I had asked little Miss Remson—Madge Remson—to have dinner with me. You won't mind having her, will you?"

"Miss Remson—Madge Remson?" The sister's voice was growing less cordial. "I don't seem to remember Miss Remson."

"I wrote you about it," Tom laughed. "She is working here as a stenographer—that's how I met her and—"

"Oh, the stenographer," purred the sister's voice. "I should be delighted. Where shall I meet you?"

"Madge dines early," said Tom, "so we were figuring on six o'clock. I'll come right over to you at your hotel and she can have time to run home and doll up and then meet us at the hotel. We can dine there as well as anywhere, and that will be more convenient for you."

Madge left early and that gave Tom's sister an opportunity to make the first of the little sisterly speeches that she felt it her duty to deliver.

"She is a perfectly splendid girl, Tom," she began. "I'm utterly satisfied. She will be a credit to the family. I'm a born judge of women and I can guarantee that."

"I had hoped you would like her," faltered Tom, who is always a little bit in terror of his substantial sister. "I didn't see how you could help liking her, but I never dared hope you would say as much as that." And of course it was not Tom's sister's way to say such nice things without a reason.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

"She is a lovely girl, Tom, and not the kind of a girl to trifle with."

She looked intently at him so as to strike conviction to his heart, but apparently there was no such result.

There were several other meetings between the sister and the dancer, and on each one the sister was more favorably impressed than on the last. Tom was working harder in his office than he had ever worked before. He told his sister that was the result of being engaged to Madge. She was insistent enough to make any man do his best, and of this the sister entirely approved. No silly little girl whose head was in her heels could have this effect on a man, that was certain.

The substantial sister remained in the city two weeks and he talking did she get of the cabaret dancer friend of her brother's whom he had once introduced as his fiancée. Well, perhaps he had thought better of his folly. She would not force a confidence out of him, but she would not go back home till she had "cleared" the matter with Madge Remson. With this end in view she urged Tom to make a formal announcement of the engagement.

"We had hardly wanted to do that," Tom protested. "A few people know of it, but because Madge is working she doesn't want to wear an engagement ring or have it announced till just before we are married."

There is no reason why you can't be married in a very little while," said the sister. "In the meantime the very fact that she is working is reason enough why she should have the engagement announced. It is something that is due to every girl who has given her promise to marry. Tom, I really insist that it be announced. I won't go home until you do."

Perhaps this last stipulation had something to do with it, for the next day Tom told his sister that Madge had consented to announce their engagement. In fact, they had gone so far as to send small notice to the various papers making the announcement, and Madge had written to all her close friends telling them of it.

The sister was satisfied and had actually made reservations for her return trip, when she chanced to buy one of the papers to which the announcement had been sent and there espied something that made her immediately countermand her order for the reservations and unpack her bags preparatory to a prolonged stay.

She confronted her brother that evening with a substantial scowl upon her face and a manner of determination.

"Now I know," she said. "You have been trifling with that lovely girl. The girl you are really going to marry is that cabaret dancer that Pete Brevier told me about, and that," said the sister, with a fine crescendo, "that is why I came all the way from home to see about things. Tom, you are going to marry Madge Remson if I have to make you."

"What made you think that I wasn't?" said Tom, with a placidity that was irritating to the enraged sister.

"This," she said grandly, producing a newspaper folded carefully to show a short engagement announcement. "Young lawyer to wed dancer," she read. "Thomas R. Rawdon, one of the promising young lawyers of the firm of Babcock & Parsons, and the clever young dancer, Madge Daw, have announced their engagement. Madge Daw is now engaged in classic dancing in the cabaret of the Terrace garden of the Bancroft hotel and is regarded as one of the cleverest young dancers in the city. There," cried his sister, "isn't that enough?"

"Won't you read all of the announcement?" asked the brother.

"I've read enough," said the sister, with finality. "That is as far as I cared to read," but as she spoke her eyes did run down farther on the column. "In private life," were the words she read there, "Madge Daw is Miss Madge Remson, a daughter of the late Bradley Remson of this city."

The sister sat speechless. "Why didn't you tell me?" were the words she finally uttered.

"Because I knew your probable prejudice against a girl that made her living dancing. I wanted you to make up your mind first that I should marry Madge, the stenographer, and you know you recently registered the determination that I should do that. Is rather strong terms."

"But why didn't you tell me she was a dancer when you first wrote me?" said Tom. "She worked very quietly away at the office and it was not till I knew her well that she told me. She is a girl of enormous strength and perseverance. It is her example that has set me to working so hard. She plugs along at the office every day from nine till five and then dances from nine till twelve—and she's fresher every morning when she starts in at work than the other girls that here no other work to do."

"Then you are going to marry Madge?" insisted the sister, who still wanted to feel that her trip to the city had been very necessary and that somehow she had had her finger in the pie of Tom's happiness.

"It seems as if I'd have to," said Tom generously, "since you have set your heart on it."

City Was Planned by Pizarro. The City of the Kings, which is now generally known by the modern name of Lima, is located in an undulating valley which extends inland from the ocean for 50 miles or more to the foot of the Andes. Through this valley the river Rimac winds its way to the sea at Callao, starting from the rivulets at least 17,000 feet high and the eternal snows of the mountains.

Nearly four centuries have passed since Pizarro laid the foundation stone of the cathedral on a small plaza known today as Plaza Mayor. Around and in the vicinity of this area the new capital began to grow.

Pizarro bestowed the name of City of the Kings upon the place as a token of honor in behalf of his royal liege lords, but gradually the native name seems to have become more and more popular.

Primitive Heating Methods.

Fire has been known to mankind since prehistoric times, and crude stoves made of stone and clay have been unearthed which were devised thousands of years ago and on which prehistoric man was able to cook his food. It was long after this, however, that devices designed for heating purposes were introduced. One of the earliest methods of heating was by carrying a pan filled with glowing charcoal into the room to be heated. Even the wealthiest families among the Persians, Greeks and Romans heated their homes in this manner. This same method is used today by the Russian peasant, the Italian and the Spaniard.

Metals Attracted by Magnet.

Magnetic separation seems to have gone a step beyond assorting materials into a magnetic and a non-magnetic pile. While iron is strongly drawn to the magnet, certain other metals and metallic minerals are attracted more feebly and it proves to be possible to separate some mixtures of materials—especially if in small particles—into parts influenced by the magnet in several degrees. In treating monazite sand, for example, magnetite is removed by the weakest magnet of a series, ilmenite is attracted by one of intermediate strength and monazite goes to the strongest.

Takes Place of Gate.

In many parts of the West and Southwest where automobiles are numerous it is becoming common to drive one's car over a fence instead of stopping to open a gate, drive through and then shut it. The new and quicker method is made possible by the construction of inclines which make it an easy matter to mount to the top of the barrier and then descend on the other side. The inclines are usually composed of two tracks, set the proper distance apart for automobile wheels and supported by posts.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Figures Never Lie.

It is amusing, though, how much printed figures can lead the imagination astray. One good lady came to sell the Keenes a quite modern coffee pot with the catalogue number, 1451, stamped on the bottom. Now it might have been worth perhaps a dollar and a half, and she asked five hundred for it because it was made "before Columbus discovered America."—Alice Van Leer Garlick, in the House Beautiful.

Frog as a Barometer.

Take a small frog and put him in a jar nearly half full of water. Set in the jar a little wooden ladder, so arranged that several of its rungs project above the level of the water. If the weather be in prospect, the frog will climb up the ladder out of the water; at the approach of stormy conditions he will retire beneath the surface.

Siberian Wedding Customs.

It is a custom in Siberia that when a woman is married she must prepare the wedding feast with her own hands. If the food is well cooked her credit as an accomplished housekeeper is established or vice versa. As a result of this practical custom most Siberian brides make good wives.

Her Luck.

"My nephew wedded a trained nurse who takes wonderful care of him when he is ill," admitted Medical Menon. "The only thing that keeps their married life from being absolutely idyllic is the fact that she hasn't the least notion of how to take care of him when he is well."

That's the Question.

She—"Anything that is worth winning is worth working for." He—"Yes, but the question is will your father loan you or will I have to keep on working for you after I've won you?"
